IN MEMORIAM.

Something Good from the Pen of Col. C. D. Poston. The Family honored by Jefferson Elies, Deacons and Glee.

Some of the Heavy Clouds Lying Over the Dead and Buried Democ-crats.

(Arizona Daily Star.)

The Democratic party was born in the State of Virginia, Anno Domini, 1800.

Its father was Thomas Jefferson, and its mother a mulatto woman from South Carolina.

After the death of the father the infant was adopted by General Jackson of Tennessee, nurtured the boy into a lusty manhood.

After the death of the adopted father, Martin Van Buren, of New York, was appointed guardian for the child.

The infant inherited a large landed estate, and many slaves from its English ancestors.

The infant was increased under Jackson, in the direction of the Gulf of Mexico, and Jefferson had bought a large tract of waste land from the French, reaching from the Mississippi to the Pacific Ocean; the slaves, in the meantime, and increased rapidly.

Under the guardianship of Van Buren, a great many orphans from Europe, mostly Irish, were adopted into the family, and a quarrel arose about removing of slaves into the new territory.

James K. Polk, of Tennessee, was the next guardian, and took from the Mexicans another piece of land, reaching from Texas to California, in order to make more room for the increase of slaves.

At the termination of his guardianship the boy had a right pretty estate in land, slaves, molasses, cotton, tobacco and some manufacturing property in the Eastern States.

After the death of Polk, the property was badly managed for several terms, and strange tried to seize upon the guardianship, which by this time became a very lucrative office.

In 1850 the ward became insane about his negro property, and Abraham Lincoln was appointed trustee to manage the estate.

Some relations of the ward by the mother's side, in connection with the insane ward, undertook a division of the property without any order from the court.

The consequence was that the poor confounded had to be called out, and a great deal of trouble ensued in recovering possession of the property, and the expense encountered the estate heavily; besides this, in the row, the negro property was entirely lost.

After this disturbance, the property was put in the hands of the Sheriff for two or three terms; but there was a great deal of stealing, and nobody was satisfied except the deputy sheriff, who had a fat thing.

During this time the property was divided into several parts, and the property was divided into several parts, and the property was divided into several parts.
